The moral instruction of this Proverb is That Persons, though skilful in their own Art, ought not to meddle or make with Things out of their own Sphere, and not presume to correct or amend what they do not understand. The Proverb is only the Latin of Ne sutor ultra crepidam, in an English Dress; and first took its Authority from a Story of the celebrated Painter Apelles, who having drawn a famous Piece, and exposed it to public View, a Cocker came by, and found Fault with it, because he made too few Latches to the Goloshoes; Apelles mends it accordingly, and sets it out again; and the next Day the Cocker, coming again, finds Fault with the whole Leg; upon which Apelles comes out, saying, Cocker go Home, and keep to your Last. Accordingly say the Greeks, σάπραν ἔλαχες, ταύταν κόσμι.

Need makes the old Wife trot.

Whether we borrow this Proverb of the French, Besoign fait vieille trotter, or the Italian, Beoigno fa trotar le vecchia, I shall not determine, being all three the same verbatim; but it intimates the great Power of Necessity, which does not only make the Young and Lusty go a trotting to relieve their Necessities, but also makes old People, who have one Foot in the Grave, to bestir their Stumps. Necessity makes the Weak strong, the Decrepid active and nimble, the Cripple walk: It gives Vigour and Life to the most languishing and feeble Starveling; makes the Lame find his Legs; excites the most Obstinate to lead or drive at the Will and Pleasure of his Master. Durum telum necessitas, say the Latins, and Ἀνάγκη ἐστὶν Στοιμαχονταί, the Greeks; though that seems to favour too much of a Stoick Fatalism.

He that reckons without his Host, must reckon again.

This, tho' a Tippling Proverb, has a farther Meaning than Persons making their own Reckoning at a Tavern or Alehouse, and is usually applied to such Persons, who are apt to be partial in their own Favour, flattering themselves with the Advantages they fancy to be on their Side in any Affair, and making no Allowance for the Disadvantage that will or may attend them; so, Chi fa conto senza l' Hoste conta due volte, say the Italians; and, Qui compte sans son Hoste il lui convient compter deux fois, say the French.

Reckon not your Chickens before they are hatched.

This Proverb took its Rise from the Vanity of anticipating our Enjoyments before we come at them; we are always brooding in our Desire, and hatching in our Minds what we would have to come to pass, before Things are ripe for it; and this Hastiness oftentimes makes us overshoot our Reason, and forfeit our Prudence, in reckoning that our own, that is not so much as in Being. But this Proverb dehort us from speaking confidently of our having, or as good as having Things in our Power or Possession, which are far off still, only in Expectancy, and depend wholly upon Providence; and not as the Latins say, Ante victoriam canere triumphum; And the Greeks, πρὸ τῆς φωνῆς αὐξάνει τὸν λόγον.

This Proverb is not only levelled at a careless Groom, but has a more extended Aim; it intimates, that it is mighty Imprudence to neglect the weighing of all the Circumstances of an Action, both as to Time and Place, before we venture upon doing what perhaps we may repent of in the Event, to our great Shame and Damage. This is generally the Wisdom of the World, when the Thing is over, we are as wise as Experience can make us. Almost all the Miscarriages of Mankind are for want of Thinking: After-Wit is commonly dear bought, and we pay for it either with Misfortune, Anxiety, or Sorrow; for there is no unthinking a Misfortune, after it has befallen us for want of Precaution and Foresight; an After-thought may enhance our Trouble, but cannot relieve our Distress; it may prevent like Inconvenience for the future, but it cannot make any Satisfaction for what is past. Serrar la Stalla quando s'han perduti buovi, say the Italians. Il est tems de fermer l'estable quand les Cheveaux en sont allez, the French. Quando quidem accepto claudenda est janua damno, the Latins. One Man had better steal a Horse, than another look over the Hedge.

This Proverb does not justify stealing at all; it means very honestly, and is only a smart Turn upon all partial Proceedings, as well in private Judgment as publick Trials. It intimates, that when great Rogues are in Authority, and have the Laws against Oppression and Robbery in their own Hands, little Thieves only go to Pot for it; and that inferior Pirates are punished with Death at the Gallows, while great Offenders live safe and secure under the Helm of Government. This proverb is for doing all People Justice alike, from the highest to the lowest, and in all Cases whatsoever, either of Desert or Demerit. We live indeed in a thieving, cheating, and plundering Age; Cozening is become a topping Trade, only we have got a genteeler way of stealing now than only to take a Man's Horse from under him on the Highway, and a little loose Money out of the Pocket; our Rapparees are Men of better Breeding and Fashion, and scorn to play at such small Game, they sweep away a noble Estate with one slight Brush, and bid both the Gallows and Horse-pond Defiance; and the Mob is not always just in this Point, for one Pickpocket deserves a Horse-pond as well as another, without any regard to Quality or fine Cloaths. But, Dat veniam Corvis, vexat Censura Columbas, say the Latins.

He steals a Goose, and gives the Gibbets in Alms.

This Proverb points at such Persons, who, by Acts of Injustice, Oppression, and Fraud, amass to themselves large Estates, and think to atone for their Rapine by doing some charitable Acts while they are alive, or when they can no longer possess them, by leaving their Lands in Mortmain to pious and charitable Uses, as building and endowing Hospitals, Alms-houses, and other Acts of Beneficence (commendable indeed, when done from a truly Christian Charity) but they who think by thus paying Paul, to atone for their robbing Peter, entertain an Opinion highly disparaging the Justice of the Almighty. Parallel to this in the Hebrew Adage.

A WELL [in the Military Art] is a Depth which the Miner sinks into the Ground to prepare a Mine, or find out and disappoint the Enemy's Mines.

Well begun is half ended.

All the Actions and Enterprizes of Man kind labour under the Reflection of this quaint moral Sentence; whether they be prudent or imprudent in the Undertaking, and good or bad in the Accomplishment.
It intimates that Persons should be very deliberate and advised in the Beginning of an Undertaking; for that to begin well is the only Way to quicken and dispatch the End, let it be what it will. It intimates that there is a great deal of Difficulty in beginning well, and that a false Step at first Start is hardly to be recovered afterwards:
That the Work does not cost half so much Trouble as the Design of it; that it is an easy Matter to make way when the Ice is broke. It reflects upon false Foundations and foolish Projects, and it holds good from Morality and worldly Affairs to Religion, That a good Beginning is a fair Step to a good Ending. Dimidium facti, qui bene cœpie, habet, say the Latins; and Ἀρχὴ ἡμισυ πავ-τος. Arist.

All is well that ends well.

It is plain Matter of Fact, that the End crowns all Things, and that every Thing is not to be judged amiss that may appear so for the present. A worldly Misfortune, if it quicken our Diligence and Industry; a severe Fit of Sickness, if it promotes our Piety, and makes us amend our Lives, is well; though for the present no Affliction seems joyous but grievous; For a happy Death is the never failing Portion of a well spent Life, which always ends in eternal Bliss and Glory. The best way of judging of Things beyond Mistake, is by the Issue or Event of them. Finis coronat Opus, say the Latins; Ende wohl, alles wohl, say the Germans; and Ααυονιδας, ημισυς αγει, the Greeks.

YOUNG [geong, Sax. Jong, Belg. Jung, Teut. Juvénis, L.] youthful not old, having been but a small Time.

YOUNG'ER [geonger, Sax. Jonger, Belg. Junger, T. Junior, L.] more young.

The younger Brother the better Gentleman.

Tho' this Proverb contradicts their Notions, who think such Persons only the best Gentlemen, who had the largest Estates, and it being the Custom of England for the eldest Son to go away with the whole Patrimony, it may to them seem a Paradox; but as it is grounded on a different Notion, so there have been, and are plentiful Instances to confirm the Truth of it; for while the Elder Brother of a House, depending upon his Estate, is either indulged by Parents, or gives up himself to an indolent Humour, so that his Soul in his Body, like a Sword in the Scabbard, rusts for want of Use, thinking it sufficient, if he have only the Accomplishments of a Fox-Hunter, or a Country Justice; the Younger Brother being put to his Shifts, having no Inheritance to depend upon, by plying to his Studies hard at home, and accomplishing himself by Travels abroad, oftentimes either by Arts or Arms, raises himself to a conspicuous Pitch of Honour, and so becomes much the better Gentleman; for it is Manners makes a Man, which was the usual Motto of William of Wickham, Bishop of Winchester, Founder of the College there, and New College at Oxford, inscribed on the Places of his Founding.

YOUNG'ER Regiment or Officer [in Military Affairs] is that which was last raised, and that Officer whose Commission is of latest Date, tho' he be ever so old a Man, and hath served ever so long in other Capacities.

 licious, taken from Cadiz, a Daice.

ZEUX'IS, an ancient Grecian Painter, who lived about 400 Years before our Saviour, and brought Painting, but then in its Infancy, to a great Perfection. He growing very rich, would at last sell none of his Works, but gave them away, saying, He did not know how to set a Price upon them equal to their Value. He painted a Bunch of Grapes so to the Life, that the Birds came and peck'd them; and afterwards having painted a Boy holding a Bunch of Grapes, which the Birds also flew to and peck'd, he was angry, and ingenuously confessed that his Work was not compleat, in that if he had drawn the Boy as well as he had done the Grapes, the Birds would have been afraid of him. And having disputed with Parrhasius, which was the best Painter, Parrhasius painted a Curtain so ingeniously, that Zeuxis taking it for a real one which hid the Antagonist's Work, desired it might be drawn, that he might see what he had done; but coming to know his Mistake, he acknowledged he was outdone, since himself had deceived none but Birds, but Parrhasius had deceived even the Master of the Art itself.

ZO'DIACK [Zodiakos, so called of ζῶν Zōon, Gr. i. e. of the living Creatures that are imagined to be in it, or the Figures of them; or of το ζω, Gr. because it is believed to afford Life and Heat to Animals] is one of the greatest imaginary Circles of the Heavens, which passes obliquely between the two Poles of the World; it is cut into two equal Parts, by the Equator, one of which comprehends the six Northern Signs towards the Arctick Pole, and the other the six Southern Signs towards the Antarctick Pole; it is furnished with twelve Constellations represented upon Globes, by the Figure of twelve living Creatures. The Sun goes about this Circle once every Year, and the Moon once a Month, and in the Middle of it is the Ecliptick Line, from which the Sun never departs; but the Moon and Planets wander up and down for the Space of eight Degrees, and sometimes more in both.

ZO'DIACK of the Comets, Mr Cassini hath observed a certain Tract in the Heavens, within whose Bounds (by many Observations) he hath found most Comets, but not all to keep; this he makes as broad as the other Zodiack, and marks it with Signs or Constellations like that, which are Antinous, Pegasus, Andromeda, Taurus, Orion, the lesser Dog, Hydra, the Centaur, Scorpion, and Sagittary.

ZOVLUS [Ζοῖλος, Gr.] an envious Person.

ZONE [among Physicians] a Disease, a kind of Shingles, called Holy Fire.

ZONES [in Anatomy and Geography] Spaces contained between two Parallels, or Divisions of the Heavens or Earth, bounded by the two Polar Circles, and the two Tropicks of Cancer and Capricorn: Of these Zones there are commonly reckoned 5; 2 Frigid or Frozen, 2 Temperate, and 1 Torrid or Burning.

The Frigid or Frozen ZONES [so called of Frigidus, L. i. e. exceeding cold; because, being extremely remote from the Sun's Course in the Ecliptick, they partake of but little of its Heat] are those comprehended between the Pole and the Polar Circle; therefore one must be towards the North, and the other towards the South: The Frozen or Frigid Zone towards the North, lying between the North Polar Circle and the North Pole, contains Part of Iceland and Norway, Lapland, Finmark, Samoseda, Nova Zembla, Greenland, and some other Parts of North America; the Frigid Zone towards the South, lying between the South Polar Circle and the South Pole, is not yet known, whether it be Land or Water.

The Temperate ZONES owe their Name and Advantages to their Situation between the Torrid and the two Frigid Zones; the one to the North Side of the Equator, between the Arctick Polar Circle, and the Tropick of Cancer, in which we live, is called the Northern; and the other between the Antarctick Polar Circle, and the Tropick of Capricorn, is called the Southern; each of them taking up 42 Degrees, or about 2580 Miles in Breadth.

The Torrid ZONE [so called of Torridus, L. i. e. parching or burning; because under the Sun's Road, the Beams fall directly on it, and continually cause so excessive an Heat, that the Ancients thought it uninhabitable] is bounded by the Tropicks of Cancer and Capricorn, lies in the Middle of the two Temperate Zones, and is divided by the Equator into two equal Parts. the one Northern, and the other Southern; its Breadth being 47 Degrees, or about 2820 Miles.

ZOO'GONIA [Ζωογονία, of ζῶς, alive, and γενν, Offspring, Gr.] a breeding or bringing forth of perfect Animals or living Creatures. L.
